

Hongkong Shares

Green Island Cement General Meeting Shareholder's Views

BY OUR FINANCIAL EDITOR

In our last article dealing with the feverish speculation in stocks and shares rampant on the Hongkong Stock Exchange we touched on the fringe of the boom in Green Island Cement shares, and promised to revert to this company at a future date. Reuter has informed us that at an extraordinary general meeting called by the shareholders the resolution doubling the capital of the company from $3,000,000 to $6,000,000 by the creation of 400,000 shares was carried by a show of hands, although the directors opposed it, four of whom on the spot tendered their resignation. Our reason for reverting to this subject is the extraordinary nature of the proceedings.

It will be recalled that in the case of many of the shares that experienced a phenomenal rise recently—and, among these, the Hongkong cement shares—nothing very substantial to work upon but mere hearsay and promises. Dame Rumor had given many shares a good turn, making the whole position farcical in the extreme. We had reports current at the time of the boom regarding Green Island Cement that the Hongkong authorities were desirous of developing the land on which the company's plant is situated and giving it "a nominal value" property in Gin Drinkers Bay. Boiled down, it meant, if the report turned out correct, that 1,250,000 feet of land at Hok Un, nominally valued at a dollar per square foot would be sold to the Hongkong Government at the market price and fetch a very handsome profit for the company.

NOTHING DEFINITE.
This, on the face of it, would justify a rise in the stock, but there seems to be nothing definite about the whole thing. Hence the request of some of the shareholders to increase the capital—actually double it—was unjustified, and certainly very unbusiness like for the directors to accept, for it would mean that the Green Island Cement Company, if it did not eventually sell its Hok Un land, would have to pay dividends on twice its capital. As a director of the company declared, the company is not in need of funds, and although it is rather uncustomary for shareholders to offer money to their company, which was not asked to contribute a cent, it would mean that a sum as large as its own capital would be lying idle in the hands of the directors and on which the company would have to pay a dividend. Anything more preposterous one has seldom come across in company meetings.

It would be well to put the shareholders' case, as outlined by one, at the extraordinary general meeting at Hongkong so as to understand both parties clearly. "The new site for the factory will be, I am told, at Gin Drinkers Bay. We have no information as to its suitability but from a passing knowledge of the district it will cost a considerable sum, perhaps $2,000,000 if not more, to develop and lay for the erection of an up-to-date factory and the provision of a sea wall, wharves, etc. On top of that there will be heavy capital expenditure for kilns. The scheme involves anything from five to six million dollars, staggering figures which require some optimism to put up." It would be seen that even were the Hongkong Government to purchase the land of the cement company in Hok Un the bulk of the profit resulting would go in installing new machinery, and land development. In the ordinary course, one would expect the shareholders to await developments regarding the reported intention of the government at Hongkong to buy the company's lands.

A LOGICAL INFERENCE.
Consequently, there is one inference that is liable to be drawn from the whole affair, that shareholders have taken advantage of the present large aggregation of capital in the colony that cannot find profitable employment and have pressed this proposition of

M. D. PURDY CONFIRMED AS JUDGE BY SENATE

Expected To Arrive
In Near Future

OFFICIAL WORD

No Court Staff Changes Expected

(BY UNITED PRESS)

Peking, Feb. 21.—Official word was received by the American Legation here today from Washington that of the appointment of Judge Milton D. Purdy to be Judge of the United States Court for China.

The United States Senate has approved the nomination of Judge Milton D. Purdy to be Judge of the United States Court for China, and Judge Purdy is now the official head of the court here, according to a telegram received last night by Mr. J. B. Powell, editor of the China Weekly Review, from Senator Oscar Underwood of Alabama.

Senator Underwood's telegram was laconic, merely saying "Senate confirms Purdy," but that much was enough to reveal that Judge Purdy's nomination had successfully passed the scrutiny of the Senate Committee on Judiciary, composed of the leading lawyers in the Senate, and had been favorably acted upon by the Senate itself.

Judge Purdy's confirmation was forecast as a certainty when President Coolidge nominated him as he is a Progressive Republican with considerable legal and judicial experience and, consequently, was certain to receive the confirmatory votes of the Administration as well as the progressive Senators both in Committee and in the Senate.

NO OTHER DETAILS.
No news concerning when Judge Purdy, Mrs. Purdy and their daughter, Miss Florence Purdy, will arrive in Shanghai has been received, although it is expected that now that he has been confirmed, Judge Purdy will leave Washington immediately for China as he knows that Judge Charles S. Lobingier's term of office having expired the Court is temporarily not functioning.

Judge Purdy for the past two years has been connected with the Attorney-General's office in settling the Alien property question, but in view of the fact that he has been aware for some time that he would be President Coolidge's appointee it is thought certain that he has made all arrangements to clear up his affairs in short order and leave to take up his duties here immediately.

EXPECT NO CHANGES.
Officials at the United States Court are very likely to remain unchanged according to those in close touch with the local situation, despite the coming of a new Judge. The appointment has no effect whatever on U. S. District Attorney Leonard G. Husar, U. S. Marshal Thurston R. Porter, or Clerk of the Court William A. Chapman as they hold their commissions from the President.

Judge Purdy, however, has the power to appoint the United

American Legation Sends Voluminous Memorandum To Koo About Duff Child

Indications Are Chinese Will Make Desperate
Effort To Keep Youngster; Answer
Expected Shortly.

(Special Correspondence To The China Press)

Peking, February 17.—The American Legation has presented a voluminous memorandum to the Chinese Foreign Office in support of Mrs. Florence Duff who has been in China for the past two years attempting to locate and get possession of her 11-year-old son. She was in Shanghai for most of that time in communication with the American Consulate-General while the Legation and Consulates in other parts of the country were investigating the ramifications of strange case.

When Dr. Jacob Gould Schurman, the American Minister, was in Shanghai last month, Mrs. Duff called on him and, as the preliminary inquiries by Consul General Cunningham and Consul N. F. Altman had been finished, the excited mother was advised to go to Peking so as to be near the Legation when the negotiations between the American and Chinese government started. Aside from the sensational features of the case, it is said by authorities on international law to be one of the strangest tangles of nationality which has ever confronted the diplomatic body.

WASHINGTON BALL
TONIGHT TO DRAW
BIG ATTENDANCE

The American community of Shanghai will turn out en masse at the Ritz, the famous palace of dance "that-almost-was" tonight to celebrate the anniversary of the birth of George Washington, Father of His Country and the first President of the United States, who was born 192 years ago today at Bridges Creek, Westmoreland County, Virginia.

While Shanghai and American communities all over the globe celebrate the event with social affairs—Washington Birthday balls are given in practically every American city, town and hamlet—the day will be officially celebrated in the United States, as it is a legal holiday in all states and possessions. Innumerable schools will close for the day after a Washington program has been given and public speakers will all take occasion to make addresses pertinent to the occasion.

In Shanghai the American community will gather for the premier social event of the year at the Ritz on North Hunan Road, just outside the International Settlement limits. Early in the year a representative committee, headed by U. S. Consul-General Edwin S. Cunningham, was appointed which has perfected arrangements for a dance that is expected to be bigger, better and more interesting than ever before.

SPECIAL DECORATIONS.
Special decorations have been installed in the Ritz with the Washington idea forming the central motif which have delighted those few fortunate who have already passed within the sacred precincts, the heating system was over-hauled, making certain that the Ritz will be warm and comfortable despite any sudden change in the weather, and arrangements were entered into with the Chinese authorities so that North Hunan Road will be closed to all traffic tonight, except traffic bound for the Ritz. An awning has also been erected so that in case of rain passengers alighting from vehicles at the entrance will run no chance of being sprinkled with rain in case of a shower this evening.

Hongkong

Hongkong, Feb. 21.—Whilst the Chinese steamer On Lee, with over 200 passengers, was on her way from Hongkong to Kowloon last night shots were suddenly fired by pirates on the main deck. The Chief Officer, Mr. T. Martin, immediately ordered the Indian guards to prepare to defend the bridge and all lights on board the vessel were put out. Mr. Martin then steered the ship to Hongkong. Near Castle Peak rockets were fired from the ship, attracting a police launch, which escorted the On Lee into the harbor. The ship was strongly guarded by the police and a large number of suspected persons were removed to the police station. It is believed that the pirates threw their arms overboard. There were no casualties.

Washington, Feb. 20.—It is understood that the Republican Senators during the last few hours have been increasingly pressing for the resignation of Attorney-General Daugherty. Mr. Daugherty in a brief conference with the President again affirmed his determination not to resign under fire. He then returned to the Department of Justice where he dictated a statement affirming his decision to stay in the Cabinet.

Upon the heels of the publication of this statement Senators Dodge and Pepper proceeded to the White House to confront the President with the growing sentiment in the Senate in favor of Mr. Daugherty's resignation.

Washington, Feb. 20.—The basis on which Senators Walsh of Montana and Caraway of Arkansas are making their fight for the removal of Attorney General Daugherty because of his alleged connection with the oil lease scandal rests on Mr. Daugherty's actions in failing to prosecute the Standard Oil Company of California, according to reviews of testimony given before the Senate Oil Committee.

DR. GARRETT, CHURCH HEAD IN U.S., DEAD

Protestant Episcopal Leader

Of 91

(Reuter's American Service)

New York, Feb. 20.—The death is announced of Dr. Alexander Charles Garrett, Presiding Bishop of the Protestant Episcopal Church of the United States, at the age of 91.

Dr. Garrett was born at Ballymote, County Sligo. He was appointed curate of East Woldham in Hampshire in 1856 and in 1859 left for British Columbia as a missionary. In 1870 he came to America and was elected missionary bishop of Northern Texas in 1874.

In the death of Bishop Garrett at Dallas, Texas, the American Protestant Episcopal Church loses one of its oldest and most beloved leaders. Born the son of an Episcopal rector in Ireland he took his theological studies at Trinity College, Dublin University, and immediately upon graduation entered into his duties as a minister of the Episcopal Church.

Bishop Garrett served as a missionary in British Columbia for ten years before going to the United States, where he became rector of St. James' Cathedral in San Francisco from 1870 until 1872. He then served as dean of Trinity Cathedral in Omaha for two years before being elected

JAPANESE LOAN BASIS IS JUST, MINISTER SAYS

Finance Chief Defends Terms
Arranged For Big
Foreign Issue

(Reuter's Pacific Service)

Tokio, Feb. 21.—Replying to critics of the recent loan transactions, the Finance Minister, Mr. Shoda, addressing the Bankers' Club, declared that Japan's application to the world's financial markets was necessitated by reconstruction purposes, which demanded the expenditure of Y. 1,500,000,000, of which Y. 1,400,000,000 must be raised by domestic and foreign loans, and Y. 700,000,000 was required by the end of 1925.

The Minister drew attention to Japan's adverse balance of trade, which by March 31 was expected to total Y. 400,000,000, and also to the high money rates now prevailing on the world's markets. He paid a tribute to the sympathy of the lending countries, which was an important asset in the success of the loan, instancing the assistance rendered by the American Secretary of State, Mr. Hughes, the American Secretary of the Treasury, Mr. Mellon, Judge Gary, the President of the United States Steel Corporation, Mr. Montagu Norman, the Governor of the Bank of England, and New York and London banks.

HAWAII FACING ANOTHER STRIKE ON PLANTATIONS

Filipino Laborers Threaten
Walkout Unless Demands Are Complied With

(Exclusive China Press)

Honolulu, Feb. 20.—The president of the Filipino Laborers' Association of Hawaii, has issued a statement saying that 15,000 of the 25,000 Filipino plantation workers in Hawaii have pledged themselves to strike within a period of twenty days unless the demands which they have made are met.

The terms which the laborers ask are a straight minimum wage of $2.00 daily for an eight-hour day, with time and one-half for overtime and work on Sundays and holidays. They also insist on recognition of their right to collective bargaining, and abolition of the present bonus system, under which laborers are paid in accordance with the selling price of raw sugar at San Francisco.

Leaders of the laborers claim that they have sufficient funds to finance the strike. It is expected that the Japanese plantation workers will join them.

The present trouble is the sequel to the plantation strike of 1920, which was organized by Japanese laborers and in which many Filipinos joined for a time. As a result of the strike of 1920, losses amounting to hundreds of thousands of dollars were caused by the sugar plantations, which are Hawaii's chief industry. The plantation owners claimed that the strike had been organized by the Japanese workers on nationalistic lines, and in order to combat the overwhelming influence of Japanese labor imported thousands of Filipinos and also sought unsuccessfully to have passed in Congress an emergency labor act which would have permitted the importation to Hawaii of 25,000 Chinese laborers on a contract basis.

London, Feb. 21.—The dockers' enquiry has adjourned sine die.

The terms of settlement of the dock strike provide for an increase of a shilling a day immediately and a further shilling a day as from May 1. There is to be no victimisation.

London, Feb. 21.—The Secretary to the Ministry of Labor states that further conferences held "at the Ministry under the chairmanship of the Minister, Mr. Thomas Shaw, resulted in the representatives of the parties reaching an agreement, the terms of which have been accepted by the employers' representatives and will be recommended by the men's representatives to a delegate conference, which will be summoned to meet at the Ministry of Labor this evening. Subject to confirmation, work will be resumed in all ports as soon as arrangements can be made.

London, Feb. 20.—Meetings of the members of the Stewards' Union at Poplar and Canning Town have unanimously decided to cease. The stewards had decided to give a few days' trial to a "stay-in" strike, after which the union officials might decide upon a full strike.

The dockers' strike has spread to Ireland. Following instructions from London, dockers at Belfast today declined to discharge ships from Britain. Dockers at Londonderry have struck.

The court of enquiry into the dispute, presided over by Mr. Holman Gregory, accompanied by Mr. H. Boothman, Secretary of the Association of Operative Cottonspinners and Sir Andrew Duncan, Vice-President of the Shipbuilding Employers Federation, opened publicly at the Law Courts this morning.

Neither of the disputants had briefed counsel. Mr. Ernest Bevin, opening the case for the dockers, said that he did not propose to call witnesses, but desired the Court to call witnesses from the other side. Sir Norman Hill, the Vice-President of the Chamber of Shipping, was present, representing the employers.

Mr. Bevin pointed out that the dockers had unwillingly accepted reductions, totalling 6/- a day, since 1921 because they were fighting to establish national agreements and to abolish casual labor, which was a social disgrace. Their present claim was for reversion to the wages paid in 1922. He asserted that many of the employers did not give their permission to reject the claim. Indeed, hundreds of companies wanted to pay the increase.

Sir Norman Hill, on behalf of the shipowners, contended that the wages reductions were necessary in consequence of bad trade. While freights had fallen, working expenses had not diminished. Many shipowners had abandoned the hope of ever making profits.

The Chairman said that the strike must be settled without delay. The Court hoped to report to the Minister of Labor on February 22.

The hearing was then adjourned.

Eloquent Addresses By Leaders Of Community Heard At Rotary Club

Sir Edward Pearce, Mr. Stirling Fessenden And Other Prominent Members Of Community Speak At Anniversary

Mutual understanding, goodwill and peace were topics of eloquent addresses given yesterday at the anniversary of the Rotary Club held at the Astor House. The principal speakers were Dr. Henry H. Hodskin, a noted authority on peace movements; Mr. Stirling Fessenden, chairman of the Shanghai Municipal Council; Sir Edward Pearce, chairman of the General Chamber of Commerce; Mr. V. G. Lyman, vice-chairman of the American Chamber of Commerce; and Mr. Fong Chu-pai, vice-chairman of the Chinese General Chamber of Commerce.

Dr. W. W. Peter read the anniversary message from Paul Harris, founder of Rotary and Mr. H. C. Fessenden, past president of the Rotary Club, read the message to the International Rotary from the Melbourne chapter. Yesterday's meeting welcomed the return of Mr. Percy Fowler, who has been touring England and America. Mr. Fowler promised to give his impressions of Rotary in England and America before a meeting of the club at an early date. The meeting was presided over by President W. J. Hawkins. A large number of guests attended the affair, including several prominent members of the municipal departments.

HODSKIN SPEAKS

Dr. Hodskin paid a glowing tribute to the utterances made by Paul Harris in his anniversary message and expressed satisfaction that Rotary has seen the direction in which mankind must ultimately move. The late Lord Bryce said: "If we do not end war, war will end us." The speaker pointed out, and it was on fellowship and international goodwill that mankind must pin its faith in order that the integrity of the world might be preserved.

Two aspects of business and professional men are noteworthy, he said. First, the business and professional men of the world have done a great deal in binding the ties of fellowship in the commercial world. Second, science and medicine in different countries have contributed to the ultimate advancement of humanity; each adherent to his contribution towards the general betterment of society in early days, diseases were fought by resorting to the bow. A pest was fought. Later mankind realized the needless waste in the practice and found a settlement in the courts of law. The substitute for war had not yet been discovered but it must be discovered in order to make the world safe for our children and children's children. The speaker sees in Rotary a new force which would blaze the trail for universal brotherhood.

Mr. Lyman pointed out the interdependence of nations and individuals as evidenced by the world war and seen in the Rotary Movement, the nucleus of a big movement which would ultimately improve world conditions.

Sir Edward Pearce, in a pleasing little talk, gave a brief discussion of the organization of the General Chamber of Commerce, which he represented at the meeting; and the club which the chamber was trying to attain in service and in co-operation with the merchants of the various countries interested in commercial China.

FESSENDEN'S SPEECH

The text of Mr. Fessenden's speech follows: "When your President, Mr. Hawkins, invited me a few days ago to speak to you at this meeting, he stated that he would inform me later of the subject which would be assigned to me and added that it would be a subject upon which I could easily speak."

"I was appalled when some days ago I received a letter from Mr. Hawkins informing me that I am expected to speak upon a subject which, put in Mr. Hawkins' own words, is 'the observance of the meaning of the idea of bringing together the business and professional men of the world to organize a fellowship for the purpose of promoting understanding, goodwill and peace.'"

"In view of world conditions, this seems to me a very tough subject indeed. It reminds me of a certain law case in which two very elderly brothers named Elmo, both over eighty years of age, were the principal witnesses. The elder gave his testimony in a very field manner. The judge complimented him upon his integrity and mental powers, and inquired to what he attributed direction in a general way in different parts of the world, but as a Club it is necessarily limited in scope and cannot command that publicity which is enjoyed by what might be termed propagandist associations.

MAKES SUGGESTION

"From a practical point of view it would seem to me possible for Rotarians throughout the world, by associating themselves very closely with the business and professional bodies to which they individually belong and thereby establishing a connecting link between those bodies and Rotary generally, which would extend the general principle of Rotary, to in time foster a union of these organizations which once effected will become a focus of world wide influence without parallel."

"Such an instrument of world wide propaganda, had it existed in 1913, might possibly have averted the Great War."

"It should be borne in mind, however, that such results cannot be attained by purely passive methods. To insure progress it is necessary to adopt and adhere to a definite line of policy and action, as the result of which the activities, influence and power of business and professional men's associations and organizations can be welded together instead of working independently as at present. In my opinion, such combined action on the part of the business and professional men of the world would establish a union which would not only wield great power for good, but do more to disintegrate international friction and distrust than the League of Nations itself."

"In closing, I thank you for your hospitality and congratulate you on your nineteenth anniversary."

FONG'S MESSAGE

A translation of Mr. Fong's speech, which was made by Mr. K. S. Zee, secretary of the Chinese Chamber, reads:

"I count it a high privilege to have this opportunity of meeting the leading business and professional men of Shanghai and desire to thank you for the hospitality and the honor you have done me in inviting me to your anniversary."

"There are two ties which bind me to the Rotary Club. The first is the tie of business. As vice-chairman of the Chinese General Chamber of Commerce it is my pleasant duty to come into contact with members of your club as individuals, which contact has been always agreeable and interesting."

"The second tie which binds me to your association is service. It is for this object, I understand, that Rotary exists and it is for this same object which to a large extent the chamber which I have the honor to represent today, was established."

"The great fundamental principle which underlines your club and my chamber is the principle of co-operation."

"I do not feel qualified to suggest in detail the means of tackling this problem in a practical manner, and must be content to confine my remarks to a few general observations."

"I believe that the Rotary Club is doing excellent work in this operation. Co-operation depends on contact. Difficulties and misunderstandings usually spring from lack of contact or understanding. When men get together and discuss matters of common interest like you do in the Rotary meetings, differences rapidly disappear and their points of agreement become more numerous."

"My own personal contact with representatives of the foreign commercial community has helped me to understand the foreign viewpoint and their individual problems in a more sympathetic way. The fellowship which you enjoy among the leaders of all the professions and trades in Shanghai is of incalculable value."

"The principle of service and co-operation between business and professional men was practically unknown in the early days when men seek to advance their own personal interests without regard for his neighbor. The needless waste of such conditions was soon realized by the wise, and the principle of co-operation was gradually developed."

"But the principle of co-operation as applied to individuals and groups of business and professional men is equally applicable to nations and groups of nations. With the introduction of steam, electricity and other scientific inventions, mankind has been closely brought to each other and becomes interdependent. So today, a disturbed condition in any one country of the world inevitably have their effect upon all the other countries, near or distant. Crop failure on one continent may mean famine on another, and high price in a third. A financial panic in Shanghai would seriously disturb financial conditions in London and New York, while there is no country which has not been seriously affected by the late world war."

"In short, no man can live unto himself alone, nor can any single nation. Individualism is no longer possible in civilized society for either men or nations. In co-operation alone lies the hope of the future. It is the surest guarantee of peace and prosperity."

"Therefore, I have the greatest hopes with your organizations. I admire the motto adopted by your organization: 'Service above Self and He who profits most who serves best.' Because after all you are helping yourself when you help others."

Next week will be known as 'father-and-son week' and each Rotarian will bring either his father or son to the weekly meeting."

"The great fundamental principle which underlines your club and my chamber is the principle of co-operation."

"I do not feel qualified to suggest in detail the means of tackling this problem in a practical manner, and must be content to confine my remarks to a few general observations."

Unlucky Gambler Causes Raid With Armed Robber Tale

Loser Avenges Self By Turning In Report To Police

A report to Sinsu police station Wednesday night that a robbery had taken place at 93 Myburgh Road brought a squad of police to that address. Here they found a merry little game of mahjong in progress and scooped in 19 of the gamblers. The armed robbery report had been turned in by a man who had lost heavily in the play. Yesterday at the Mixed Court the proprietor of the establishment was ordered to pay a fine of $30 or go to jail for three weeks and the others were assessed $2 each. Another gambling raid was made Wednesday evening by Sub-Inspector Wilson and other officers at 607 Canton Road. Here 46 Chinese were arrested. The proprietor was fined $30, or 3 weeks' imprisonment, and his patrons paid $2 apiece for their flutter with the dominoes, besides contributing a considerable sum in stakes, found on the tables, to the Court exchequer.

"The principle of service and co-operation between business and professional men was practically unknown in the early days when men seek to advance their own personal interests without regard for his neighbor. The needless waste of such conditions was soon realized by the wise, and the principle of co-operation was gradually developed."

"But the principle of co-operation as applied to individuals and groups of business and professional men is equally applicable to nations and groups of nations. With the introduction of steam, electricity and other scientific inventions, mankind has been closely brought to each other and becomes interdependent. So today, a disturbed condition in any one country of the world inevitably have their effect upon all the other countries, near or distant. Crop failure on one continent may mean famine on another, and high price in a third. A financial panic in Shanghai would seriously disturb financial conditions in London and New York, while there is no country which has not been seriously affected by the late world war."

"In short, no man can live unto himself alone, nor can any single nation. Individualism is no longer possible in civilized society for either men or nations. In co-operation alone lies the hope of the future. It is the surest guarantee of peace and prosperity."

"Therefore, I have the greatest hopes with your organizations. I admire the motto adopted by your organization: 'Service above Self and He who profits most who serves best.' Because after all you are helping yourself when you help others."

Next week will be known as 'father-and-son week' and each Rotarian will bring either his father or son to the weekly meeting."

"The great fundamental principle which underlines your club and my chamber is the principle of co-operation."

Madison Square Stoves Models of Beauty

In this model, attention has been paid to beauty as well as utility. The illustration does not do justice to the design. It is neat and simple, yet looks well in the most elaborate drawing room.

This stove is made of very heavy cast-iron with nickel-plated facings and foot rests. The doors in front and sides are fitted with mica, giving a large area of glow. Every part is perfectly fitted, and finished with high class workmanship.

There are many advantages in the construction of this model.

Hongkong Shares

doubling the capital with the probable object of profiting by same. Anyone with commonsense can see that any new issue placed by the company is to bring profit into the pockets of the present shareholders. The company's shares of $7.50 paid are quoted at $37 buyers, although they went up to as high as $42.00. It stands to reason that the new issue, whether one dollar paid or $7.50 paid, must stand as high in proportion as the old issue, so that if the agitators are eventually successful in carrying the day they will be so much richer by the new issue. It would be interesting to know how many of the shareholders who attended the extraordinary meeting intend to stay on the company's register for very long. Probably many intend to be shareholders just as long as they get an opportunity of getting out with profit to themselves.

It is certainly unlikely that the resolutions which were passed at the extraordinary meeting on February 7 will be confirmed at the meeting that is to be called on February 26 for the simple reason that these were passed by a show of hands, as the shareholders who signed the requisition demanding an extraordinary meeting only held 125,000 shares, out of a total of 400,000 shares. We shall await developments at the confirmatory meeting.

REAL OPTIMISM

It is very amusing to read some of the remarks made by speakers at the last meeting of this company. One shareholder argued that if the Green Island Cement works could turn out more than the present output of 900,000 barrels there would be no competitive cement brands from Norway, Germany, Sweden, Haiphong and Shanghai. Listen to this cameo: "When Hongkong has a producing capacity large enough to defy all competition, I say we shall be safe. I can picture in my mind's eye, within the present generation, Hongkong not only as a commercial port but Hongkong, like Shanghai, all the way from Woosung along the banks of the Whangpoo, a flourishing center, with the border line of our territorial waters on the mainland flanked by such buildings and chimney stacks that will make Hongkong a big industrial as well as a commercial port of which we may all be proud."

That is a fine flight of optimism, but he might have gone further and said that at least sixty percent of the present shareholders might very likely not be on the shareholders' register of the Green Island Cement Company after a year or two. All that is required, according to this shareholder, is to increase the plant of the company, and this will kill all competitive brands.

We are afraid that this will never be effected, for most of the competitive brands are being imported into China purely on the score of their cheapness, and they will at all times find a ready market. Importations of cement into China have increased remarkably in recent years. Over one-third of our imports come from Japan, while those from Hongkong are only half of the Japanese, with French Indo-China running very close on the heels of Hongkong. Then comes Italy with a phenomenal increase to her credit, China having imported in 1922 from that country 271,918 piculs of cement valued at Tls. 283,928 against 14,002 piculs valued at Tls. 14,608 in 1921 and 7,865 piculs in the year preceding. From Japan there were imported in 1922 1,162,574 piculs of the value of Tls. 1,478,291 against 972,468 piculs estimated value of Tls. 1,401,377 in 1921 and 684,356 piculs valued at Tls. 739,036. Hongkong has shown equal improvement, for in 1922 China imported from there 885,153 piculs valued at Tls. 969,972 against 470,176 piculs valued at Tls. 629,967 in 1921 and 252,549 piculs at Tls. 287,960 in the year preceding. The total net imports into China during these three years read as follows: 1920, 1,751,854 piculs valued at Tls. 1,840,170; 1921 2,533,918 piculs valued at Tls. 3,656,487; 1922 3,172,798 piculs valued at Tls. 3,977,357.

PEKING PAPER HUNT WON BY COL. RUXTON

Interport Affair Held Over Interesting Course in North

(Reuter's Pacific Service)
Peking, Feb. 17.—Under excellent weather conditions, which enticed many people to the meet, the Peking Paper Hunt Club held the Interport Hunt this afternoon. At the sound of the Master's horn about fifty riders got away, the first run being between two or three miles. At the first check there were very few riders missing, and after a rest of two minutes the Master led the field away again. The second run was not so long, a few excellent jumps, kaoling fences and walls being encountered. The second check was for about three minutes, when the Master lined up the field to go away on the home run. The field went away at a fast pace towards the first jump of the run, with Mr. H. E. A. Davey leading. Along the valley the leaders were Mr. H. E. R. Davey and Mrs. Peeney, closely followed by Mr. Teichman and Mr. Murray. At the jump on the crest of the hill Colonel Ruxton, Mr. Teichman and Mr. J. S. Jones went over together, coming in sight of the spectators. Immediately after the jump was a thin line of trees, at which the Buccaneer swerved, bringing his rider's right leg into violent contact with one of the trees. This unsettled him and he slid under his pony. Mrs. Peeney and Mr. H. E. A. Davey went up to third place, but could make no impression on the leader, Colonel Ruxton, who passed the post half a length ahead of Mr. Teichman, with Mrs. Peeney in third place, two and a-half lengths behind. The card reads as follows:—

1. Colonel Ruxton on Grey Mist.
2. Mr. Teichman on Red Tape.
3. Mrs. Peeney on Cinders.
4. Mr. Bradley on Microbe.
5. Mr. Murray on Hain Feng.
6. Mr. J. E. Andrews on Gironde.

The Tientsin visitors were entertained at dinner at the Peking Club on Saturday evening.

A surprisingly large number over all other games is that athletic sports—golf, tennis, riding and the like—with an entirely mistaken idea concerning the benefits they hope will accrue as a result of such participation. They go about their recreation in such a mistaken way that the aims they hope to achieve are made impossible from the start.

Anybody who knows the fundamentals of physical culture will tell you that the primary purpose of sport; that is, sport that is indulged primarily for exercise and the maintenance of bodily health, is to afford complete relaxation.

"Complete relaxation" is a flexible phrase, susceptible to varying interpretations. For a wheel barrow coolie, with muscles aching from a hard day's toil, complete relaxation would be found in eight or nine hours of sound sleep. That amount of sleep would refresh his exhausted muscles and make him as good as new, so to speak. In the case of a wheel barrow coolie nature's problem is simple; only a question of resting and restoring the muscles of his body, with his brain (or the substance inside his brain cavity) needing no attention whatever.

In the case of the business man complete relaxation has an entirely different meaning. With him it is a question of providing rest for the brain. The muscles need hardly be considered, since they are little used and consequently never really exhausted.

There is but one factor that enters into the wheel barrow coolie's weariness, to wit, physical toil. In the case of the brain worker there are two factors, namely, toil, and mental strain. Get this straight: every brain worker has a certain amount of actual, concrete work to do—letters to dictate, decisions to make, plans to approve or reject, suggestions to consider, employees to placate, financial transactions to weigh—a thousand and one things that are "work" exactly in the sense that a coolie's activity is work, the only difference being that the business man does his work with his brain whereas the coolie does it with his arms, back and legs.

But the great, fundamental difference lies in the fact that with the coolie there is but one strain; one load to carry, whereas with the business man there are two strains; two loads to carry, namely, the strain of the actual work, and the added strain of responsibility and worry.

Of the two strains on the business man the last is by far the most exhausting. Worry and responsibility! They are the twin demons of destruction that press down on men without their knowing it. You and I know of business men who are old beyond their years; aged and broken when they should be in the prime of their lives, and when you analyse the causes you find that it is the strain of worry and responsibility that rests upon them with crushing weight. The actual "work" they do is next to nothing. They may not even be in their office more than three or four hours a day, but the strain and responsibility are with them all ways, day and night, robbing their days of leisure and their nights of rest.

Well, then, the whole purpose of athletic sports is to get these men "away from themselves." If they play tennis they must play it, not with the mere idea of spending an hour or so out of doors, but with the idea of perfecting their strokes and beating their opponents. Their world, for the time being, must become a world of tennis, with absolutely no other thought protruding.

The same applies to golf; they should go into their golf game, not with the idea that the walk around the course will do them good, but with the idea of making every shot as perfect as possible; with the idea of thinking, not about their business as they walk, but of their golf weaknesses, and of mastering both themselves and their opponents.

That will mean complete concentration, and that, in turn, will mean complete relaxation from their business. When the business man plays golf in that way and with that purpose in mind the result is that "change of occupation" which alone is perfect rest.

THE great advantage of golf of business men indulge in it forces that relaxation. Men start out, frequently, to play golf as a duty, but they soon find that this game will countenance no rival. Its problems are so numerous and so entangling that those who play it soon find themselves absolutely absorbed in its difficulties, and just in proportion as they forget everything else in their efforts to master those difficulties, just in that proportion do they achieve that "complete relaxation" which is the purpose of sport.

A Sports Angle Of The Oil Lease Scandal

(Exclusive China Press)
Washington, Feb. 19.—It has just been revealed that Col. J. W. Zevely, attorney for Harry Sinclair, the multi-millionaire oilman, now one of the central figures in the Teapot Dome oil scandal, liked Mr. Zevely so much that he named his famous race horse, Zev, after him. Testimony before the Public Lands Committee also revealed that Col. Zevely acted as a "man Friday" for Sinclair in his alleged fraudulent deals with ex-Secretary Fall.

NEW FIELD FOR USE OF RUBBER IS DISCOVERED

Association Chairman Urges
Latex For Waterproof
Tea-Chest Linings

(Reuter's Service)

London, Feb. 20.—In a paper read before the Royal Society of Arts on new uses for rubber, Mr. P. J. Burgess, the Chairman of the Rubber Growers' Association, suggested that Ceylon tea-planters might experiment in waterproofing tea-chests with rubber latex instead of lead-foil. He anticipated that crepe rubber rolls would become the standard equipment of all boots and shoes, but the crepe rubber must be plantation finished and the retail price of such footwear must be reduced to equal to or less than leather-soled boots and the liability of the rubber sole to slip in wet weather must be overcome. The difficulty of obtaining satisfactory adhesion of the rubber road block to its base appeared to have been solved, Mr. Burgess was of opinion that the use of large blocks would overcome the remaining difficulties of rubber road construction, which was the only direction in which he saw hope of solving the chief rubber problem, namely, finding a use for rubber on a big scale, which would function as a practicable proposition with raw rubber at some pivotal price, say, 1/8 per pound.

Sinclair To Take Stand In Senate Oil Inquiry

piece of land which he considered valuable oil land. Senator Walsh connected his testimony up with testimony given by former Assistant Attorney General Leslie C. Garnett of the Department of Justice, attempting to show that this land, just for so long, was the entering wedge by which it became possible for Secretary Fall to let Edward Doheny of the Pan-American Oil Company have the whole Naval Oil Reserve District No. 1 in California, the lease from which Doheny said he expected to make $100,000,000.

Those prosecuting the oil leases hope to prove that this land was first maneuvered in such a way that the Standard Oil Company of California obtained the right to drill there. It is known as Section 36 and the center of Naval Reserve Section No. 1. Then the assertion was made that the Standard Oil Company was getting the oil out from under the entire naval reserve and the reserve would, in a short time, be dissipated. The next step was to lease the entire reserve to Doheny.

It is in this line of testimony that the committee hopes to entangle Attorney General Harry M. Daugherty. It was Daugherty, Mr. Garnett testified, who called him off from a prosecution of the Standard Oil Company of California which had it been successful, would have resulted in removing the operators from this spot where it was possible to drain the whole naval reserve. Had this suit been prosecuted, Senator Walsh asserts, the excuse for leasing the whole reserve to Doheny would have disappeared.

Daugherty, Garnett testified, sent him orders through the vice-president of the Standard Oil Company of California to do nothing until he should confer with the Attorney General. There was no such conference, and later an attorney for the Standard Oil Company appeared before Secretary of the Interior Fall and made an oral argument, which Fall decided in favor of the company.

It was to this whole affair that Senator Walsh referred on the floor of the Senate when he said that suspicion had been attached to the Department of Justice and therefore prosecutions in these oil lease matters should be conducted by independent attorneys.

(Exclusive China Press)

Washington, Feb. 20.—An interesting phase of the Teapot Dome scandal of particular interest to Americans favoring the recognition by the United States of Soviet Russia has been brought out in a statement made before the Senate Oil Committee by Col. J. W. Zeverly, attorney for Harry P. Sinclair, who is alleged to have bribed ex-Secretary of the Interior Fall with $100,000 gold to secure the Teapot Dome lease in Wyoming.

Of the $100,000 the sum of $10,000 was for the ex-Secretary's expenses on a trip to Russia, Col. Zeverly said. Col. Zeverly explained that concessions which the Sinclair interests had obtained from the Soviet Government would lapse after a certain time unless Russia was recognized by the United States. He explained this as a reason why Sinclair was anxious to have Fall go to Russia as he had a great respect for Fall's ability as an international lawyer.

Sinclair Adams of Colorado, in cross-examining Col. Zeverly on that point asked him if he did not know that after Fall returned from Russia he advocated the recognition of the Soviet.

Adams also asked the witness if the lease obtained from Russia by the Sinclair interests was valuable.

"The geologists think it is," Zeverly said, smiling.

"It takes up the whole southern half of Sakhalin Island," he said a moment later.

SINCLAIR GOT HALF ISLAND

Zeverly explained that under the Treaty of Portsmouth half of this island was left in the hands of Russia, and it was this section the oil resources of which had been turned over to Sinclair to keep. If American recognition could be obtained, otherwise for only a short period.

As a matter of fact, it is the northern half of this big island, which leads off northwesterly from the northern tip of the Japanese archipelago, which was left in the hands of Russia by that treaty. Both Great Britain and Japan have been keenly interested for the last few years in this territory because of the conviction it contained enormously rich oil fields.

(Reuter's American Service)
Washington, Feb. 20.—While Mr. H. P. Whitney, a prominent

New York stockbroker, was giving evidence before the Senate Oil Committee today, Senator Elkins (Republican) of West Virginia announced that he had purchased Sinclair Oil stocks and was perfectly willing to go before the committee and tell all he knew about the matter.

employers into line with the rest of the ports with regard to a new offer by the employers, which, it is confidently expected, will form the basis of a settlement if it is agreed upon. When the meeting concluded after a long session, a statement was made but such is possible when the court of inquiry resumes tomorrow.

The road transport commercial group committee has requested the National Strike Committee to instruct road transport workers to strike.

The Grant's orchestra is made of musicians from the University of Illinois. The committee responsible for the success of the social affair was composed of Ensign Smith, B. J. Lamberti, E. Counts, W. ## H. E. Jones Fined For Failing To Stop At Crossing

Mr. H. E. Jones was fined $3 when he appeared before Magistrate King in the British Police Court yesterday charged with failing to promptly obey police signals at the crossing of Kiangse and Nanking roads just before midnight on February 5. The Sikh on duty at the crossing testified that Mr. Jones entirely disregarded the signal against him and despite the fact that the night was a foggy one continued along Kiangse Road at a speed of 20 miles an hour. His action, he said, nearly caused a collision with a car coming along Nanking Road. Mr. Jones explained that he had not seen the signal was against him until he was halfway across the street and then put on speed to avoid a collision with the car on Nanking Road.

OLD BILLS

Adventures in America

by Bruce Bairnsfather.

Progress

"CAPTAIN!"
"Yes, Bill."
"I know you could see this place now he'd get a bit of a surprise."
"Yes, Bill, things have certainly progressed since his day. What do you think would surprise him most?"
"Old Bill sat silent for a moment and then suddenly said, 'Ice.' That's the worst of Bill, he's so inconsequent."
"Ice! Why ice?"
"Well, Captain, I've never seen ice handled as it is over here. It must make Esquimaux mad with envy. You can't ask for a thing without you get ice with it, and when you don't ask for anything you get it just the same."
"Yes, I've noticed that, too, Bill."
"Yes, sir. If you sit at a table and say nothing a waiter will come along and pour out a glass of ice water with real ice floating in it!"
"If you ask for a bowl of boiling soup he'll give you ice water first. 'Ice with everything,' Captain, that's the motto. I wouldn't be at all surprised that if you put your boots out to be cleaned in this hotel there would be a glass of ice water standing by them when they came back."
"Well, that's progress, Bill; progress with regard to ice."
"I dunno what it is, Captain, but I like it. We'll miss it whenever we go back to England again. Fancy asking for ice there!"
Bill laughed a hollow, scornful laugh. I know what he was waxing sarcastic about.
In England ice holds a very small and precarious place in the land. It can only be obtained by writing ahead or a row with the management. The fish apparently commandeered our entire supply. If you suddenly request the waiter to bring you ice in a restaurant, he has to go downstairs and steal it from the fish, who are reclining against it, and water with a had-dock flavor is disappointing. Somehow, they haven't got the right perspective about ice with us. It's used for fish and head-docks almost exclusively. This subject, although a side of progress, was not quite the one that interested me. Bill is rather apt to think along the ground. But what I mean is that everywhere in America and in everything one feels and notices a ceaseless desire for improvement. Nothing is final. One feels that brains are all around in workshops and laboratories, passionately endeavoring to make advances, however small, in all branches of national life.

Better chewing gum, baths, plumbing, trains, airplanes, hotels and Peace.
There are big brains over here studying the problem of progress in permanent Peace. This is where the greatest difference from Europe comes in. Over there we almost want another war to get a rest from the kind of Peace we've got.

"And what I say to you men is, that if we had more co-operation, more honest-to-goodness, hundred per cent work in this cause, then the object which we have in view will be realized. We must get together. Make service with the old slogan. There's no such word as 'I can't' and I would say further etc etc."

Hands ready to applaud.
One day I'm going to "get together" and feel how it sounds.

Rival Admirals Are Involved In Dispute

(Hester's Pacific Service)

Peking, Feb. 18.—It appears that friction has arisen between Admiral Tu Hsi-kwei and Admiral Wen Shu-teh, commander of the Tsingtao squadron, over the occupation of the naval office at Chefoo by marines belonging to the Tsingtao squadron. It is stated in naval circles that, when the squadron reached Chefoo, marines were landed and occupied the naval office, and complaint is made that this was done without notice being given of their intention to do so or receiving authority to occupy the premises. On learning what had been done, Admiral Tu Hsi-kwei became angry, and it is believed that the object of Admiral Wu Yu-lin's contemplated journey to Nanking is to mollify Admiral Tu. The date of Admiral Wu's departure has not yet been announced.

"Way Down East"
Back Here Again

D. W. Griffith's wonder spectacle, "Way Down East," which comes to the Princess Theater for seven days commencing February 22 is assured a wonderful reception from the hearty response that Manager has evidenced from his patrons.

No theatrical attraction of the year has created the stir that has followed since the opening presentation this production at the 44th Street Theater in New York City early in September, 1920. It crowded that theater twice daily from the start and was given such unstinted praise that it has been acclaimed the greatest picture of all times.

"Way Down East" was a play by Lottie Blair Parker which Joseph R. Grismer helped adapt to the stage and enjoyed unusual popularity for over a decade upon the regular stage. D. W. Griffith has taken this basic story and by his new art form which represents a combination of music, drama and motion pictures, has produced a classic. It pictures New England rural life with a fidelity and charm which cannot be approached under any other circumstances. To this absorbing tale of love and lovers Mr. Griffith has given it those touches which make his work something apart from all other forms of dramatic and pictorial entertainment. Its great punch comes after the former story would ordinarily terminate and is the greatest scene ever conceived in the theater.

ASTHMADOR

DISCOVERY OF A LEADING PHYSICIAN

ASTHMA
HAY FEVER AND
SPASMODIC CROUPA RELIABLE REMEDY FOR
ASTHMA

The Doctor wants each sufferer from Asthma, difficult breathing, Hay fever, or Bronchitis, who has not already used his remedy, to have a sample and give it a trial.

When asked his reason for giving his remedy away in this manner he said:—"People are naturally sceptical about an asthma remedy, and when you consider the number of so-called 'cures' on the market, you can hardly blame them. Now I claim that my remedy will instantly relieve the most violent attack, no matter how severe or obstinate the case. If I do not believe it, why should I be giving it away? The sufferer who gets a sample package can tell in two minutes whether it is as I represent it, and it does not cost anything. That is fair, isn't it?"

It certainly does not look as if anything could be fairer.

Anybody who desires to try this medicine, will be sent a free sample by cutting out the attached coupon, and enclosing stamps for postage, (one cent for local post, or two cents for places outside the town mentioned on the coupon). Or you may call and get it. By giving this a trial you may obtain relief at once, and prove the value of this remedy.

Cut out this coupon and send it to one of the stores mentioned, and you will receive a free sample.

COUPON

Please send me a free sample of Schiffmann's Asthmador, for which I enclose stamps to cover postage.

If Washington Could Come Back!

NOW that the Americans in Shanghai have settled their annual controversy over the place where the annual Washington Birthday Ball is to be held and the contributors to the correspondence page of the North-China Daily News have had their annual battle of ink over the proper date for the celebration of the birthday of the Creator of the United States, it is now time for us to print our annual editorial comment on the life and work of the greatest of all the Americans. And he was the greatest American, for Lloyd George recently gave him credit for founding the British Empire and teaching the English in 1776 how colonies should be governed. It was this teaching at the hands of Washington and his sturdy followers in the New World which formed the basis for the great and world-wide development of the British Empire which has now developed in recent years into the Commonwealth of Self-Governing Dominions. Daniel Webster at the cornerstone laying of Bunker Hill Monument said:

"America has furnished to the world the character of Washington. And if our American institutions had done nothing else, that alone would have entitled them to the respect of mankind."

And if we desire more testimony here is the statement of Abraham Lincoln, a tribute to Washington made on February 22, 1842:

"This is the 110th anniversary of the birthday of Washington. We are met to celebrate this day. Washington is the mightiest name on earth—long since mightiest in the cause of civil liberty; still mightiest in moral reformation. On that name an eulogy is expected, it can not be. To add brightness to the sun or glory to the name of Washington is alike impossible. Let none attempt it. In solemn awe we pronounce the name and in its naked, deathless splendor leave it shining on."

But what if Washington should come back? Offhand most persons would say that he would be disappointed and grieved at what his succeeding countrymen had wrought in the land of his devotion, but perhaps he wouldn't be surprised at all. Washington's last and most important message to his people was to beware of foreign entanglements. "The great rule of conduct for us," he said, "in regard to foreign nations is, in extending our commercial relations, to have with them as little political connections as possible. So far as we have already formed engagements, let them be fulfilled with perfect good faith. Here let us stop. . . Why forego the advantages of so peculiar a situation? Why quit our own to stand upon foreign ground? Why, by interweaving our destiny with that of any part of Europe, entangle our peace and prosperity in the toils of European ambition, rivalry, interest, humor or caprice."

Well if Washington were alive today he would find his countrymen still agitated over this question of foreign entanglements. He left the presidency with his countrymen split into violent factions over the question of America's true policy toward France. Today he would find his people still exercised over the same question in a somewhat different form. Washington left his countrymen with rather violent feelings against Great Britain for the wounds of the Revolutionary War were still fresh. Today he would still find a good many with suspicions, but he would find on the other hand a general feeling of friendliness on the part of most Americans toward the people who speak their language in the British Commonwealth of Self-Governing Dominions, a feeling that developed largely as a result of the European War but which has prospect of continuing for an indefinite period.

Washington's advice to his countrymen to avoid permanent alliances with European nations was sound and is sound today, but Washington was dealing then with a specific problem. America the new-born nation had need for peace and a chance at self-development. He feared domination of his young country by the policies of France or England. Now the situation has changed and America stands on her own feet in a dominant position. No intelligent citizen fears dictation any more. The pressing question now is how to use this power for the benefit of the American people first, of course, but after that for the assistance and advantage of the whole world in the cause of universal peace. As one writer recently put it, if Washington were alive today he would advise the American people to face the facts as they exist and not to fetter themselves with ancient formula devised for a condition which no longer exists.

The Danger Of Ideals

THE war had killed the doctrine that in order to get peace you must prepare for war. All nations that prepared most, got most war. . . The only adequate defence was a changed international atmosphere." The foregoing is briefly the policy of the British Labor government with regard to armaments as enunciated by the Under-Secretary of State for Air during a debate in the House of Commons on a motion proposed by Sir Samuel Hoare in which he invited the House to affirm the principle of maintaining a home defence air force of sufficient strength to give adequate protection against the strongest air force within striking distance of British shores. The mover of the motion was not, it will be noticed asking for the establishment of a two-for-one standard in the air. That seems definitely to be relegated to the background since it was dropped in matters naval, and having in view Britain's political situation in Europe it would seem that the least the Opposition could ask for would be a one-for-one policy.

The attitude of the Government will probably come as a surprise to many, who probably refused to believe that even Labor would be so careless of the safety of the British Isles in time of war as to refuse to take adequate steps for its protection by the best military means possible. Yet, on the face of it, the Labor Government, if Mr. William Leach's statement fully reflects the opinions of the Cabinet, are preparing to adopt the doctrine that the best method of preparing against war is to do nothing, that failure to maintain adequate means of defence is the best method of ensuring that Great Britain never will be attacked. Obviously the statement of such a Gilbertian paradox could do nothing but arouse the hostility of the Opposition and though the motion was talked out, and a division of the House thereby avoided, the Speaker expressed the opinion that the point was of such importance that another opportunity should be afforded of discussing it when the Air estimates were before the Commons.

If the principle laid down on behalf of the Government were true, it would be safe to assume that the Great War was won by the Allies because Britain was in a lamentable state of unpreparedness, a factor which undoubtedly encouraged Germany to believe that she could disregard British intervention in the quarrel which she had picked with France. We know from the bitterest of experience that unpreparedness cost the Allies hundreds of thousands of lives that would have been saved to the world had they been able with sufficient men to meet the German invasion and transform into absolute disaster the defeat of the German armies; we know that the long drawn-out agonies of the world would have been considerably abbreviated if the state of preparedness for which such men as Lord Roberts were continually preaching had been in existence.

Nevertheless within six years of the cession of the bloodiest war in history we find what should be a responsible government calmly arguing that the best preparation against war is to do nothing, to beat swords into ploughshares and to lay open to the attacks of possible enemies the very heart of the Empire. We agree that there is not a civilised people on the face of the globe which does not desire the advent of the millenium, and few who do not believe that in the course of time it will come. It is also permissible to think that each country should make every possible effort to assist in shortening the time during which armaments will still be necessary, but it is idle at this juncture of the world's history to believe any nation can contribute to its own safety by omitting to take the necessary precautions against the onslaughts of another or the ultimate resort to force for the settlement of some otherwise insoluble difficulty.

The tendency amongst those who are working towards the establishment of means of avoiding warfare in the future is to believe that eventually the pressure of public opinion will be sufficient to curb recalcitrant nations, that by the same means the judgments of an international court of justice will be endowed with a weight which at present they do not have. But no matter how far we have advanced along these lines so far as the individual is concerned, as between nations justice is still the justice of the strong as against the weak. For this reason it is impossible to view the statement made on behalf of the Labor government with anything but the gravest misgiving. Certainly Mr. Leach laid his party open to the attack which the Opposition proceeded to make on it and there can be little doubt that when the proper time comes the matter will be forced to a division. Whether Mr. Ramsay MacDonald would resign if he were defeated on so important a point or not it is difficult to say, but there seems reason for the impression that if he were to go to the country on such a point he would have little further opportunity of subordinating practical politics to the doctrines of idealists.

PLATO'S DIALOGUES AS LITERATURE

When Dr. Jowett's translation of Plato's "Dialogues" appeared several years ago, a story was current that a Western newspaper closed its review of the work with the remark that Plato was "one of the greatest of English prose writers! No finer tribute was ever paid to a translator, and that Plato got the credit of Dr. Jowett's beautiful skill was the most unaffected of compliments to the art of the accomplished Master of Balliol College.

Plato had long been studied as a thinker, but the "Dialogues" as literature had received small attention. An occasional scholar had paused by the way in his philosophical studies to note the range and beauty of Plato's style, and to feel the charm of a literary quality rare at all times, and in no other instance possessed in equal degree by a thinker of the first order. For while there have been philosophical writers of force and clearness, Plato is the only great literary artist who has drawn upon all the resources of language to give philosophic thought vividness, adequacy, and perfection of expression.

The Greek genius gave many illustrations of the power of art to receive and communicate the most subtle and powerful as well as the most subtle and delicate impress of the soul of man on his fellows and his time, but in nothing was the depth and force of the artistic impulse more impressively shown than in the case of Plato, the amplitude of mood, the ripeness of spirit, and perfection of form with which a system of thought was set forth. Under the spell of an artistic impulse so pervasive and so genuine, statesmanship became a matter of harmony and co-ordination quite as distinctly as sculpture or architecture. For Pericles was as great an artist as Phidias; oratory touched the sources of power in speech with an instinct as sure and true as that of the poet. For Demosthenes was as genuine an artist as Sophocles.

It was reserved for Plato, however, to discern the profoundest questions of life not with the aridity of a purely logical method, but with the freshness, the charm and the grace of one to whom the divine Master never ceased to be the divine Artist. The structure of the Parthenon discloses complete mastery of the art of building, but in the thought of its builders the pure construction of that noble treasure-house was never separated from the obvious and matchless beauty which makes it a thing of joy even in its ruins. In like manner, the most poetic of Greek thinkers did not divorce, even in thought, the massive structure of the universe from that beauty which clothes it in the sense in which beauty clothes the flower, by growing out of its hidden substance.

SHANGHAI'S GREAT NEED

Editor, THE CHINA PRESS:

Dear Sir: In many ways the foreign settlement of Shanghai is such a model municipality that one hesitates to assume what might be constructed as a critical attitude. But the absence of anything resembling a museum of natural history and fine arts is the subject of comment, not to say complaint, among those who would like to see our city rank in cultural matters with other important world centers.

Twice within the past week this need has been emphasised by exhibitions of considerable importance and artistic appeal which were placed before the public through the enterprise of two public spirited women's organisations: i.e. The exhibition of pictures assembled through the efforts of the British Woman's Association, and the rare Tibetan collection of religious and household objects shown by Mr. R. R. Service under the auspices of the American Woman's Club. Both collections merited consideration and study which it was not possible to give them within the time limits that could be accorded for their display. Both suffered from the fact that in the circumstances it was impossible to show them to the best advantage.

When one contemplates the amount of money ungrudgingly expended to give the Shanghai public good music, to afford physical recreation, to maintain proper roads for motor cars it would seem that such a valuable educational adjunct as a good museum could be secured provided the community awoke to the possibility of its realisation.

The modern museum has come to play an important part in intellectual development not only because of the educational opportunity it affords growing youth by visualising and vitalising what otherwise would be merely dead matter and hearsay art—"book learning"—but in the cultural stimulation it brings to the entire community and the very real help it gives to students, scholars, scientists, artists, writers and all others who seek to form contacts with life through deeper channels than mah jongg and golf.

That Shanghai contains many persons who are intellectually hungry is evident in the increasing number of thoughtful groups that have arisen this winter for serious discussion, and in the number of persons to be found at lectures good, bad and indifferent, however badly advertised.

Unquestionably Shanghai possesses the nucleus for a good museum which would also contain a reference library and art galleries, where loan collections could be shown, as well as affording a permanent home for objects of art that would accrue as time went on.

If the various social organisations that look to the betterment of the city, if public spirited individuals and men and women of artistic ability and scientific achievement could be brought together, with the co-operation of the newspapers it seems to me that the community would get back of such a movement and push it on to an achievement worthy of the spirit that has made of a mudhole a beautiful and important city.

China has become the happy hunting ground of the archaeologist. Her treasures are shipped all over the world to innumerable museums and stimulate further research while we in Shanghai have little knowledge of and less opportunity to learn from these records of the past than residents of far off Chicago, New York, London. Doesn't it seem worthy of an effort? Thanking you for any courtesy you may extend this letter, I am etc.

various languages, especially English, French and German, as there are many medical men in Shanghai who are familiar with but one of these languages.

Under the auspices of the Art Section it is proposed to organize an Art Exhibition in Shanghai this spring, and later in Peking and Tientsin, at which both European and Chinese artists may exhibit their work. Announcements regarding these exhibitions will be made later.

One of the main objects of the Society will be the establishment of a Natural History Museum, Art Gallery and Reference Library, and the activities of the Shanghai members will be directed to that end. It is hoped that similar undertakings will be attempted in other important centers in China.

The only qualification necessary for membership to the Society is an interest in its aims. The annual subscription is $10.00 (Shanghai Currency) and this entitles the member to the privileges of the Society and to receive The China Journal of Science and Arts, its official organ. Members may belong to any or all of the Sections, provided they conform to such regulations any section may decide upon. Applications for membership should be sent direct to the manager of the "China Journal of Science and Arts," at the office of the latter, 102 The Ben Building, Shanghai; which is also the headquarters of the Society for the present.

tempting to soberly discuss in legal phraseology.

MARRIED IN 1911

In 1911 Mrs. Duff married Teng Chien-I when he was Chinese ese immigration inspector at Washington. She had been a student at Holy Cross Convent, Washington and St. Elizabeth's Convent, Baltimore. Mr. Teng had left China when he was fourteen years old to be educated in England and later had become a naturalized British subject in Canada. When he eloped with Mrs. Duff to Philadelphia, she was only seventeen years old.

Two sons were subsequently born but while they were still babies, the father died at the hands of a Chinese assassin at Columbia, Missouri. Shortly after that an uncle of the children, Admiral Ching, Pek-kwong, arrived in Washington on an official mission for the Chinese government. He was the famous admiral who delivered half of the navy to the South in the revolution of 1915, and later was assassinated while leaving the naval headquarters on Dutch Folly Island in Canton. His statute now stands on the island.

Admiral Teng Kwok-hing, the grandfather of the boy over whom the struggle is now raging, also was famous in Chinese history. As vice-chairman of the naval staff under the empire, he built up China's only modern navy. Later under the republic he was the director of the Canton arsenal and at the time of his death at his ancestral home, near Canton, was director of Kwangtung province river conservancy board.

BRINGS BABIES BACK

Admiral Ching and the Chinese Legation in Washington, speaking for their grandfather, Admiral Teng, persuaded Mrs. Duff to bring the two babies to China that he might have the comfort of the children of his eldest son in his old age. As a result, they were brought to their father's native land while they were little more than one and two years old respectively.

A few months later Mrs. Duff received word of the death of her father in America and being anxious to be with her mother, she decided to return with the babies. The Chinese grandfather, however, wanted at least one of the children left with him in China to which the mother at first objected since she wanted them to have their education together and in America. However, she finally consented to leave them in China while she made a hurried trip to the United States.

Receiving monthly letters from Admiral Teng, telling of the children, the young Widow did not return to China in the next two or three years. In the meantime the War came and while in Washington she married again, her new husband being Captain Leonard Duff, an aviation officer who had been serving with the British army in France. Fate again stepped in and Mrs. Duff was soon left a widow for the second time through the death of her captain husband in action early in the war.

NO WORD OF CHILDREN

After the war had come to a close the letters from China suddenly ceased and Mrs. Duff could get no word about the children she had left there. At last when the Chinese delegates to the Washington Conference arrived in America, Mrs. Duff was able to learn through Admiral Tsai Ting-kan that the letters from her Chinese father-in-law had stopped because the old Admiral had died.

Having reported the matter to the American State Department, Mrs. Duff started for China and in the two years that have elapsed, she has been struggling not only to regain possession of the youngest child, but even to find out where he is. Her eldest boy had died and the son, Linwood, for whom she is seeking would be eleven years old on the nineteenth of this month. As nearly as she can find out, the boy is living with his grandmother at Shanghai, in the Huengshan district, to the south of Canton.

A factor which lends complexity to an already difficult case, is the fact that Mrs. Duff was the second wife of Teng Chien-I, his parents claiming to have married him to a Chinese girl when he was 9 years old, before he left the country for the west. Thus the family can put forth the claim that the American mother of their grandchild is in the position of a second wife, who in China has no right to the children, the latter belonging to the husband and the first wife. The Chinese feel all the stronger on the subject since the boy as the eldest male, is now the head of the family and it is his obligation to perpetuate the line of his ancestors which would be destroyed were he to be given to his American mother. An additional argument is put forth that Mrs. Duff through her remarriage is no longer a member of the family of her husband.

WHERE TO APPEAL?

The question remains open as to whether Mrs. Duff can assert her right and obtain possession of her son through the channels of diplomacy in Peking or whether she must resort to the Mixed Court.

However, even if a diplomatic or legal solution be decided upon, the actual securing of possession of young Linwood, is another matter. His Chinese relatives live in Kwangtung which is not in very close co-operation with the Peking Government and the question then would arise as to whether any order of the Central Government would find obedience there.

Another ramification in this curious international tangle is the fact that the Chinese wife of Mrs. Duff's first husband is a relative of Tang Shao-yi, the famous Chinese statesman now residing in Shanghai. The first wife of Dr. Koo, Minister of Foreign Affairs, was Tang Shao-yi's daughter and the Chinese Minister to Washington, Dr. Alfred Sze, is likewise related to the former Premier, so that there is that personal phase in the affair. Further, it is not known whether Linwood Teng, who was born in the Alabama Apartments, Baltimore, can even speak his mother's language much less realize that he has an American parent who wants to take him away from the home he had known for ten years.

Medico-Biological Section Formed As Part Of China Society Of Science And Arts

The formation on Monday last of a Medico-Biological Section of the China Society of Science and Arts marks the latest development in the wave of intellectual interest that is sweeping Shanghai and China generally.

In a recent issue of "Nature," one of the leading British scientific papers, the well known American geologist, Professor J. W. Gregory, F. R. S., who recently carried out an expedition into West China to investigate geological problems in connection with the highlands of Yunnan, publishes a highly interesting and instructive article entitled "The Scientific Renaissance in China." Amongst other phases of this subject he mentions the activities of "The China Society of Science and Arts," and "The Shanghai Chemical Society," both of which have for their official organ, The China Journal of Science and Arts, and both of which have been started recently in Shanghai.

THE SOCIETY

The China Society of Science and Arts is the outcome of a movement set on foot by Mr. A. de C. Sowerby, primarily to have a Biological Society in China, with a journal of its own. It was found, however, that there were not enough biologists in China to undertake such an organization successfully and so it was decided, after consultation with Dr. J. C. Ferguson, the well known sinologist, and advisor to the President of the Chinese Republic, and other prominent scientists in China, to form a society with a sufficiently wide scope to embrace all branches of human knowledge in relation to China.

In order that individual sciences and arts should be given due prominence, it was decided to have "Sections" for these within the larger organization.

The Society has now been formed, and the officers for the present year elected. Several "Sections" have been formed, and the society now stands as follows:

OFFICERS

President: Arthur de C. Sowerby, F. Z. S., F. R. G. S.
Vice-presidents: John C. Ferguson, Ph. D. (Arts); Herbert Chatley, D. Sc. (Science).
Honorary Secretary: Verne Dyson, B. A.
Honorary Treasurer: Clarice S. Moise, B. A.
Committee: Mary A. Mullikin (Miss), J. G. Anderson, Ph. D., Wu Lien Teh, M. D., C. R. Kellogg (Prof.), George D. Wilder (Rev.), Lit. and Biol. Section: Hon. Sec.: D. J. C. Ferguson; Hsi Chiao Huting, Peking.
Art Section: Hon. Sec.: Miss M. A. Mullikin, 397 Elgin Avenue, Trenton.

Biology Section: Hon. Professor C. R. Kellogg, Fokien Christian University, Fookien, Fukien.
Chemistry, Physics and Mathematics Section: Hon. Sec.: Dr. H. Chatley, Whangpoo Conservancy.
Medico-Biological Section: Hon. Sec.: Dr. F. Reiss, 14 Kiukiang Road, Shanghai.

Mr. George Sokolsky of 40 Route de Grouchy, Shanghai, is organizing a Political and Social Science Section.

There is provision in the Constitution of the Society for Patrons; that is to say, any one who donates a sum of $100.00 or upward to the funds of the society becomes a patron. Mr. E. Luty is the first patron of the Society.

SOCIETY'S OBJECTS

The objects of the society embodied in Clause I of the Constitution are as follows:

The Society shall be called "The China Society of Science and Arts," and shall have for its aims the advancement of Scientific Research in China and the promotion of interest in Chinese Arts, Literature, Philosophy and kindred subjects. Its activities shall take the form of encouraging the establishment of Local Museums, Research Stations, Field Clubs, Art Galleries, Technical Exhibitions and Reference Libraries, etc.; to co-operate with all public establishments such as Biological and Pathological Laboratories, Fisheries Boards, Meteorological, Astronomical and Sismological Observatories; to assist as far as possible the work of individual qualified investigators; and generally to advance human knowledge.

The activities of the Society have already begun to be felt.

Owing to the interest and generosity of Messrs. Arthur and Theodore Sopher, who have kindly placed the beautiful concert hall in their residence at 445 Avenue Joffre at the disposal of the Society, the latter are now able to hold monthly meetings, at which matters of intellectual interest, especially in regard to China, are discussed by competent lecturers. These meetings are held on the last Saturday of each month, at 5 p.m. the hosts very kindly providing refreshments, and at which all interested in the progress of science, art, literature and kindred subjects in China are welcome.

At the first meeting, held on Saturday, January 26, Mr. A. de C. Sowerby, gave his presidential address, taking as his subject "The Progress of Science in China." Dr. F. Oppenheim gave a most interesting lecture on "Birth Ratios in China," and Mr. G. Sokolsky a lecture on "Secret Societies in China."

MEET TOMORROW

The next meeting is tomorrow at 5 p.m. when Dr. Chatley will speak on "The Mystery of Cohesion" and Mr. Jabin Hsu a lecture entitled "Gems of Chinese Literature." The objects of the recently formed Medico-Biological Section are:

1. To carry out medical and biological research work in China.

Dr. Garrett, Church Head In U.S., Dead

BISHOP OF DALLAS

When Dallas, the metropolis of the Lone Star state, was created a distinct diocese he became Bishop of Dallas and has labored in that field ever since.

Just before the war Bishop Garrett became blind but when Dallas became the center of the gathering thousands of newly enlisted men, and particularly hundreds of lying cadets who attended services at St. Michael's Cathedral in Dallas each Sunday, the old Bishop, despite his blindness and the weight of his years appeared each Sunday to preach and inspire the future flying officers of the American air forces with their duty to their country and the world in the conflict.
